for vulnerable older disabled or homeless people who need accommodation and support a variety of different services have been developed from hostels and group homes to extra care housing and retirement villages but do these settings effectively improve the well being of those who live in them this book explores the rationale behind these accommodations and the impact different forms of accommodation policy and practice have on the lives of vulnerable people arguing for a flexible policy approach that places people in control of their own lives applying an original evaluation framework to case studies in the united kingdom and sweden two countries with long and differing service histories accommodating difference raises important questions making it a valuable resource for supported housing practitioners and policy makers as well as for students of urban studies planning and health and social care feeling hurt in close relationships presents a synthesis of cutting edge research and theory on hurt being hurt is an inevitable part of close relationships what varies from relationship to relationship is not whether partners hurt each other but how their relationship is affected by hurtful episodes given the potential influence of hurt feelings on people s interpersonal relationships it is not surprising that scholars have begun to study the antecedents processes and outcomes associated with hurt this collection integrates the various issues addressed by researchers theorists and practitioners who study the causes of hurt feelings the interpersonal events associated with hurt and the ways people respond to hurting and being hurt by others to capture the breadth and depth of the literature in this area the work of scholars from a variety of disciplines including social psychology communication sociology and family studies is highlighted

this history of computing focuses not on chronology what came first and who deserves credit for it but on the actual architectures of the first machines that made electronic computing a practical reality the book covers computers built in the united states germany england and japan it makes clear that similar concepts were often pursued simultaneously and that the early researchers explored many architectures beyond the von neumann architecture that eventually became canonical the contributors include not only historians but also engineers and computer pioneers an introductory chapter describes the elements of computer architecture and explains why being first is even less interesting for computers than for other areas of technology the essays contain a remarkable amount of new material even on well known machines and several describe reconstructions of the historic machines these investigations are of more than simply historical interest for architectures designed to solve specific problems in the past may suggest new approaches to similar problems in today s machines contributors titiimaea f ala ilima lin ping ang william aspray friedrich l bauer andreas brennecke chris p burton martin campbell kelly paul ceruzzi i bernard cohen john gustafson wilhelm hopmann harry d huskey friedrich w kistermann thomas lange michael s mahoney r b e napper seiichi okoma hartmut petzold ra□l rojas anthony e sale robert w seidel ambros p speiser frank h sumner james f tau jan van der spiegel eiiti wada michael r williams
